Lewis to star in new PBS kids' show

By John Kiesewetter
Associated Press

The "Charlie Horse Music Pizza" is a family-run business.

Entertainer Shari Lewis stars in a new PBS children's show beginning Jan. 5 (check local listings for station and time), set in a California beachfront pizza parlor with her long-time puppet family, Charlie Horse, Lamb Chop and Hush Puppy.

The 12-time Emmy winner also knows that kids' favorite food is pizza, which is why the musical series was set in a pizza parlor.

Helping Lewis and her puppets pals run the shop are a raccoon named Fingers; a young assistant manager (Wesley Morris); and a skateboarding orangutan named Take Out (musician and gymnast Chanz Perry).

Playing fun-loving "Cookie" the cook is veteran actor Dom DeLuise, who made his TV debut in 1960 with Lewis on "The Shari Show." "We have been friends ever since," she says.

Charlie Horse gets top billing because he's "the hands-down favorite of boys," she says. "Lamb Chop had her own show, so this one is for Charlie Horse."

Lewis has taped 20 episodes, which will repeat through spring. Another 20 shows will roll out in September.
