High school farce mirrors American Graffiti

PETER BIRKE
SUN/STAFF WRITER
WHEN IT COMES time to make the definitive movie about high school grad night in the '60s, call it Dazed and Confused II. Disillusioned youth who spent their last day of classes ignoring the teacher, and their last night before freedom not to drink and/or stoned.

The sociological structure of a Texas high school in 1978 consists of jocks on a horizontal rampage, young women with attitude, drop-heads suffering a rapid drop in brain cells and jocks too smart to have any fun.

He warned that he has a wholly incorrect view of drug abuse, so endemic that drug class becomes a great place to craft a home. Getting high, speeding to a bush bush and then spinning their wheels, these are the members of a lost generation forced to suffer the worst mistakes of their teachers.

ROBOCOP: New lead actor fits cyborg costume like glove

Following in Peter Weller's footsteps. "But eventually I felt the role could work both dramatically and aesthetically for me."

I think you can have action without violence. It's not as though there's no violence at all in this film, but it's not gratuitous. DIRECTOR: FRED DEKLER RoboCop, Tarzan, Batman, or Sherlock Holmes. All these characters, he notes, have been strong enough to survive being portrayed by a number of different actors.

The actor - who normally weighs in at 170 pounds - had his suspension confirmed when he stepped onto a scale and set the needle at 270.

chronicle of that go-ahead firm, Omni Consumer Products, which in the first RoboCop movie was instrumental in restoring murdered policeman Murphy to life by turning him into an armored cyborg.

LOCALLY WRITTEN show called it through and Alpha reports at the Vancouver Fringe Festival and on the strength of them, it's exciting to hold over Cohen's nightgowns and probably even ending in New York next June.

Getting the support of the community proved easy; the performers sold out. But "his performance at the Fringe fell like nothing," Horton says, so after the festival he found a hold-over slot at Coleridge nightclub.

They're not making a decision in New York until February, Horton says. "But look like we're a front runner. We have a 95 per cent chance."

Atlanta - Rapper and actor Tupac Shakur criticized by his vice president Dan Quayle for anti-police lyrics, was arrested and charged with shooting two off-duty police officers.
